

THE END OF HEAVEN

“Violence does not always and necessarily lunge straight for your throat; more often than not it demands of its subjects only that they pledge allegiance to lies, that they participate in falsehood.” – Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn

“From the edge of the earth we have heard songs, praise to the righteous; and I said, Woe to me, woe to me, alas for me! The deceivers deceive, with deceit the deceivers deceive!” –Isaiah 24:16

“Heaven is a place where nothing ever happens.” So sang David Byrne of the Talking Heads. While I can’t speak of the nature of God’s heaven, having never perceived it, I very much believe things are happening there...God’s WILL is being done. But our heaven, while in the body, here on the earth, is our own mind. What happens there indeed has consequences—out-workings in the physical realm. Believing things, whether false or true, shapes our heaven, and these beliefs shape our earth. Put another way, our understanding or faith in a concept is what finally constructs our reality, and the degree to which we have control over it. Believing in a lie will lead to loss of control and can be—and often is—deadly.

Two extraordinary turn of events have transpired in our world in the last 12 months... Two delusions which are paradigm shifting. The Covid-19 fraud began the year 2020, and the false U.S. “elections” ended it. Both debacles were long planned in advance and dovetailed together towards the end goal of what the power-mad elites call “The Great Reset”. We’ve talked about most of the aspects of their agenda and how the masses were deceived into participating in it. But as the lies became more and more obvious, careless, and egregious, some of the true believers have fallen away. More momentous is that a great many of the American “patriots” have now realized that their hope in their Constitutional government was misplaced at best. As the so-called rule of law has broken down and the farce of a “democracy” has been exposed for what it always was, many have now jettisoned their false hope. As such, a huge portion of society still holding to conservatism has now discovered that they’ve mistakenly put their hope in man to bring them justice. As always, this has failed, and now there will be blood.

Right now as I write this, a chaotic transfer of power allegedly took place in the U.S. Capitol building where “duly elected” congressmen legitimized a blatant miscarriage of their own laws regarding the election of a U.S. President. Thereafter, an unprecedented assault of a mob of very unhappy, disenfranchised, former Americans stormed the Capitol Rotunda after being goaded into it by President Trump himself, who, rather than lead them to victory, retreated to an “undisclosed location” to watch it on TV. Thereafter, he asked them in a public message to “go home in peace”.

I say “former Americans” for a particular reason. The mask of legitimacy has slipped. When the illusion of democracy was forever lost to these people, the legitimacy of the authority of government also has failed. And this may be the most profound and ominous sea change of all. If Americans were made up of “We the People,” realizing finally that there is no We, only leaves Us and Them. What comes after that can only be the formation of separate nations, or else a complete dissolution of what was once the land and the people of America through tyranny, collapse and blood sacrifice. Not necessarily in that order.

Perhaps the great irony in this is that it was the “heathen” patriots which first saw the hypocrisy exposed. It is predominantly the unbelievers who are waking up to the fact that the so-called Constitutional Republic was neither of those things. So far, it appears the vast majority of nominal Christians are still under the spell of the Idol Shepherds, which leadeth them into dark waters and destroyeth their souls with calls for “peace and safety” when neither of those things exist. How they shall attempt to legitimize the “authority of the higher powers”—no longer “ordained by God” in Romans 13, but rather by the open and unashamed fraud of sham elections and the complicit MSM (main stream media) which sanctioned it will be interesting to see. A government established upon nationally televised FRAUD and the unashamed propaganda of Globo-homo media shills will be a hard sell for the flag-waving Churchmen to their congregations... Still, I remain confident they’ll manage to muddle through the confusion and accept the “new normal” as their pastors lead the way.

Once again, none of this happened over night (even though it literally and ironically did!). Waking up after a night of chaos and bloodshed inside the very Capitol building wherein the “People” demanded their rulers “do the right thing”... they learned their lords in the wee hours of the morn’ had gone ahead and affirmed the new geriatric king and queen witch anyway—brazenly declaring in fact, they’d done the “will of the people!”

Many, however, have seen this coming and understood the causes as well as the consequences.

Thirty years ago, Cristopher Lasch wrote The True and Only Heaven lamenting—or eulogizing—the end of the progressive era and the impending final heat death of the Vanity Fair which America had become. Much insight can be found therein. But what he saw then barely holds a candle to our present glory—or darkness, depending on your perspective. He wrote,

“Disinformation monopolized the airwaves. It was not that Americans had become stupid or credulous, but that they had no institutional alternative to the consumption of lies...But public opinion polls now made it possible, in effect, to dispense with the electorate by allowing an infinitesimal but allegedly representative sample of the population to determine the outcome of elections in advance.”

Fundamentally, he asserted, the progressive society, “having no sense of sin” was now wholly at the mercy of our hallowed propagandists (the triune god—scientists, politicians and the media organs)... Having thus gained divine power over the hearts of men, “as the rivers of water: they turneth it whithersoever they will.” Again, that was three decades ago.

And here we are. We have arrived at the end of heaven.

We see now unlike ever before how the power of deception over the majority of a population can be devastating to all. And it’s not a hedge of salvation that the minority may still see the lie for what it is (as some of us indeed do), because we’ve lapsed into national sin now and there must be a national reckoning. As Isaiah cried out, “Woe is me!” witnessing his nation being wholly deceived, “Alas for me!” – for he suffered along with them. If tradition is correct, his own death at the hands of the obstinate king of Judah in defying his idolatrous decrees was by being “sawn asunder” (Hebrews 11:37).

To the self-declared rulers, the truth is a meaningless concept anymore. A “transgression” only means disobedience to their arbitrary edicts. Yet it is to these rulers that the churchmen still demand allegiance —even to this very day when in the face of ALL evidence and experience to the contrary, they STILL hold to the false dichotomy of both a pandemic and a just government held together by the sacred Constitution, Science, and the Fiat Dollar. None of this is based in reality; the people and the rulers together have succumbed to madness and superstition and blindness to the very real and devastating consequences to immediately follow.

But, “allegiance to lies” will carry us through the storm... Or it won’t. Christianity has been reduced to obedience to false gods regardless of their cavalier deceit and power-mad plans for genocide and Full Spectrum Dominance, because Romans 13. Just do what you’re told, and all will be well.

We have arrived at a crossroads where we will be forced to choose one path or the other. I believe the days of fence-sitting are nigh over. The Marxists and the fools have already walked down the road to the left and there is no turning them back—but for the rest of us, for those who still name the name of Christ, we will now have to decide whom to obey—fully. Those deceived by the Idol Shepherds (Zechariah 11:17) per Romans 13 will take the broad road of the heathen and follow Baal, while those of us who remain on the side of the Lord must take the narrow path on the right. In the days to come, Caesar will make his demands upon (former) Americans, which will be binding and have permanent consequences, and non-compliance will be punished brutally. Unfortunately, many of our “brethren” will likely assist him in the enforcement of those diktats—because it’s the law. We need to be prepared for that reality.

Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. (Joel 3:14)

Make the decision now and do not wait your turn for your line in the sand to be crossed. Because I believe that the multitudes will suffer the most in that day for their indecision.

On that note, as we prepare to cross the Rubicon, I think it’s worth ruminating for a moment on this land we call America. There’s some dispute about where the name originated, and the official story that it was named after Amerigo Vespucci may indeed be spurious. (Since when are places named after someone’s first, or given name?) There’s actually precious little evidence for it in any case. But one theory is that the name derives from the Old English or Celtic , meaning, roughly, ‘the land or realm of heaven’. I’ve no opinion either way. But, it seems God had set His love upon this land once, and He’d prepared it for a people who would one day call upon His name. Not unlike the promised land of ancient Israel. If so, there may be an awful connection between the fates of each.

“From the edge of the earth we have heard songs, praise to the righteous...”

Incidentally, that word “edge” is kanaph... meaning “wing, or skirt; extremity (as of a garment)”. It denotes a border—a periphery. Presumably, at the end of the earth is the beginning of heaven. This is often alluded to in Scripture, both geographically, and metaphorically. As is often the case, it is also imagined prophetically, although I don’t find anywhere in Scripture that the earth will ever literally end. (Only evidence for the contrary in fact, e.g., Psalm 119:90, Ecclesiastes 1:4). Looking at it from God’s perspective, however, the ends of heaven are the beginning of the earth. Perhaps we should take consolation in this little poetic turning.

Nevertheless, when the end came for Old Jerusalem and the Old Covenant Age, it was no picnic. And empires usually don’t die peacefully in their beds, but there’s nothing wrong in praying for that end. I've heard not a few others relishing the Apocalypse, and they'd do well to heed the prophet Amos:

"Woe unto you that desire the day of the Lord! to what end is it for you? the day of the Lord is darkness, and not light".

We have enough woes as it is, brethren. My appeal is that we look for immediate solutions, map out the emergency exits and seek those who have repentant hearts, giving them courage and hope for the "joy that cometh in the morning". Principally now, we must find ways of forming our own assemblies (ecclesia) and communities of like-minded believers—and those otherwise open to the truth, who have rejected the Babylonish system. In practical terms, right now INFORMATION is critical. We were all dumb once, and somebody had to show us knowledge... if we possess it now, our duty is to share it faithfully to those who will receive it. Second to that is the acquirement of critical resources—while they are still available. Verbum sapienti sat est.

Nonetheless, it's time to say our goodbyes to the place we knew as "America". As another wiser than me has said, "America is not the United States of America". Bearing that in mind, this System we all were born into and brought up in is LOST. It must be dismantled and it will be painful. It is for us to "ask for the old paths" back to what was once America—that is our calling.

And they that shall be of thee shall build the old waste places: thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations; and thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in. (Isaiah 58:12)

Either that or we'll be buried under the debris.

The key for those of us who will be among those builders is in knowing and identifying the deception which drove this madness and has fostered this generational rebellion against Yahweh. How and why we got here is as important as knowing the way back, because the enemies of Christ will use these tools again. History and "facts" can and will be manipulated... the gospel of the Kingdom, "once delivered unto the saints", we know has been largely lost in the minds of men. And doubtless it will be denied and attacked again in the future if we are not DILIGENT to protect it. Let this be our highest priority.

And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever. (1 John 2:17)
