

THE FIRMAMENT

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." –Genesis 1:1

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork."
—Psalm 19:1

"Hast thou with him spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?"
—Job 37:18

Space, the final frontier. These are the voyages of starship Earth, a wandering, spinning planet, one of billions like it, which God made and cast out into the infinite void. Its five-billion year mission: to explore strange 'new truths', to seek out new 'life' and new civilizations, to boldly go where no man has been permitted to go...

Paraphrasing television programming from the 1960's, Star Trek was one of many shows beaming the idea into American living rooms and countless fertile minds that We Are Not Alone... The Universe itself, being our Creator, beckons us into its infinite bosom to learn our true origins and develop the ultimate potential of mankind to be as the gods. And from the beginning of human history this has been our singular sensation—the Tower of Babel being mankind's first collective attempt to breach the very gates of heaven.

We remember God's retaliation.

The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men. (Psalm 115:16)

Perhaps that is a subtle rebuke to that generation who would one day come and boast of invading the very heavens with their phallic dirigibles. It's quite telling that those flights of fancy we've witnessed in our time have revealed nothing of any value for mankind, but rather have only shored up their contrary claims to the Creator that, in fact, there is no God; 'we've entered into his alleged Courts and lo, we found nothing but cold, dead rocks drifting through the maw of oblivion.'

And yet, according to our modern churchmen, the claims of NASA do, somehow, reveal the Plan of God's creation... because of all the dead spheres in the heavens, our earth is special, as it's the one He chose to create the race of men upon. And which He Himself visited in the form of one of these men in order to save them from death...the eventual fate of all the universe. This of course is nothing but a corruption of the Truth, and it's the reason why the greater lie is so easily swallowed by believers—they neither learn the Word of God for themselves, nor believe what they have read.

But, the “universe” and its fate is a Disney fiction, one of many, which is being used to control the opposition in the “churches” whilst they (the Production Managers) engage in building their own earthly kingdom around us. Thereby have most sincere Christians been sincerely misled, and as a consequence of their ignorance they've fallen into all sorts of idolatry.

Therefore, I'd like to talk about this fiction and (hopefully), effectively share some conclusions which many of us—in, and outside of Christendom—have learned with regard to the nature of this deception, its purposes, and the deleterious effects it has had on Christian society in particular. Although this is a VAST subject with seemingly endless evidence and conjecture against NASA's claims and that of the 'Space philosophers', I will attempt to hit some of the high-points in a short series of articles (with the hope that many will continue in their voyage of discovery and finally escape from the spell of those wizards “in high places”).

Regarding the evidence and claims of “proof of concept” which NASA and the Spacemen have made (and I will hereafter refer to any involved in this nearly century-old psyop as “Spacemen”) and our claims of evidence to the contrary, let's begin by stating the obvious so that we know what we are up against:

They have no counterevidence other than “images” (unless you count the “moonrocks” which proved to be petrified wood).

That, and the lying testimony of a handful of men and women complicit in their Program, who've acted as “witnesses” to the charade... Namely, “astronauts”. It should also be noted here that the great majority of people working within, and propagandizing for NASA and all the space-related industries are wholly unaware of the deception—as they are unwittingly part of it. At the top of the pyramid is an elite group of initiates into NASA's mystery religion—these are the engineers, drone pilots, CGI artists and various stage hands necessary to conduct the illusion, and they are, and have been, accurately described as the Satan-bought cult members which they are. (Well-researched books and interviews with family members of such “Masonic elites” and other eyewitness testimony are available to the curious). Easily a number of pages could be written here detailing that aspect of the conspiracy alone (with citations galore), but we have to move on. However, as Agent Mulder liked to say, “the truth is out there”.

The “Christian” version of NASA's ideology as I depicted it in the introduction is actually what every Evangelical, Protestant, and Catholic “church” teaches, bar none. I know not of any denomination that does not teach this 'Christianized' doctrine of cosmology. And yet, as we read from the very first verse of the Bible, it does not jibe with God's account of reality...which is the only account which can be true.

The earth, whatever it truly is, was made to be the abode of man. It is where all of history plays out. It is the stage where God's plan for mankind is revealed in time (which is itself a concept only applicable to our mortal reality). And this reality—this physical realm in which we exist—is based upon two principle things, according to the Scriptures... The "heaven", and the "earth". No other worlds are expressed or accounted for. After the earth is described in its primordial formation, thence, God made "two great lights", the moon and the sun, to "rule" over the earth, and within the heavens above He placed the stars in their circuits, "for signs and for seasons". We note from the Scriptures that He created ALL of the heavenly bodies on the fourth day of creation—AFTER the earth and heavens were made.

These facts are, needless to say, refuted by modern cosmology.

Churchmen have attempted to reconcile this conflict in a myriad of different ways—and I've read them all—to convince the sheep that their theistic version of cosmology is, in fact, equal and consistent with the atheistic evolutionary cosmology of "Science," which is actually what God was trying to say all along... They accomplish this feat by ignoring Genesis 1, while pretending not to. Their audience, those in the pews, are left none the wiser for the simple reason that they are blinded by bullscat. Being uninitiated in the hermeneutics of scripture—not having gone to seminary, nor being able to parse the Greek and Hebrew, in the original, they simply must rely on the "experts" that can. This leading of the blind by the blind is a phenomenon first described some 2,000 years ago by a Man who never even went to college.

Blindness is optional, however. We can simply choose to believe what God actually said, and then look around and study Creation using those guidelines. Those who have done that throughout history have found no inconsistencies with our observations as compared to God's revelation...

Thus, we come to something God calls the "firmament". Somewhere above the earth is an impenetrable barrier. This need not be a physical barrier (though God's description of it would indicate that it is)—and I propose that it may be equally spiritual and psychological (we'll come to that later). But today, even mainstream "science" acknowledges something akin to a firmament. From that article, this statement is made:

"It's almost like these electrons are running into a glass wall in space. Somewhat like the shields created by force fields on Star Trek that were used to repel alien weapons, we are seeing an invisible shield blocking these electrons. It's an extremely puzzling phenomenon," said Prof Baker, who is the first author of the paper published in the journal Nature.

It's only "puzzling" to those who deny God and His Word.

By no means do I intend to validate all of their conclusions in that paper, but it is one piece of evidence for our point of view—which is usually ignored, and its scriptural ramifications. However, besides that prospect (which is way out in the supposed "Van Allen Radiation Belt"), there is a much better known artifact of creation—tested, verified, and long ago harnessed as a modern technology—something known as the ionosphere.

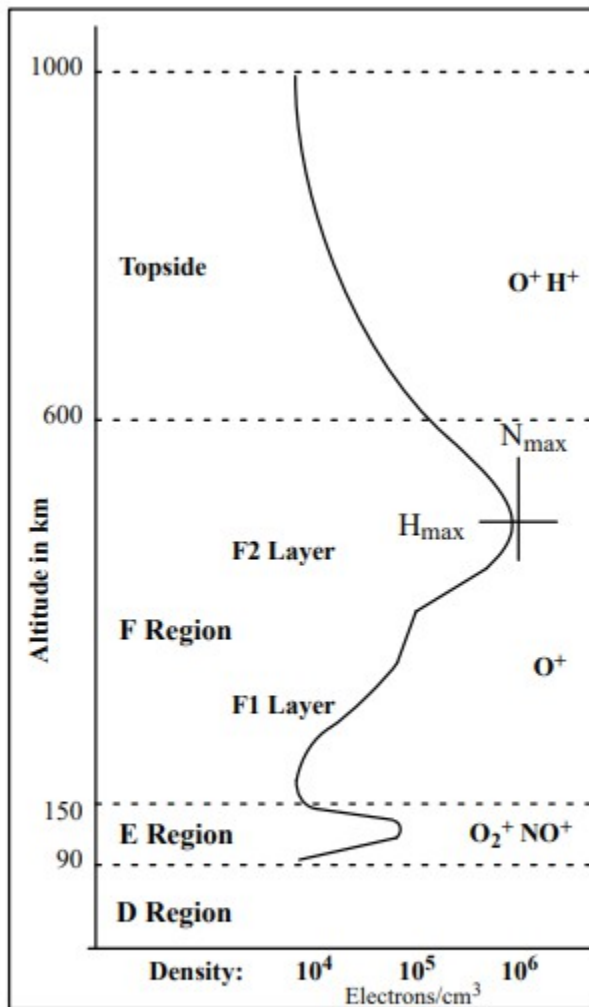

Figure 2. Various layers of the ionosphere and their predominant ion populations are listed at their respective heights above ground. The density in the ionosphere varies considerably, as shown.

This facet of our creation was initially proposed in 1839 by Carl Gauss (electrical-nerds out there may have heard of him); an electrically conducting region of the atmosphere, it was theorized that radio propagation could be made thereby. Certain frequencies could potentially be transmitted by "bouncing" off the ionosphere around the alleged "curve of the earth". By 1901, proof of concept was established with the first successful transatlantic radio transmission between Newfoundland and Cornwall, Wales... The letter “s” in Morse code. Thus began the modern “satellite radio” era (which we’ll revisit later)! But, in fact, today ionospheric radio transmission is employed (admittedly) for all sorts of telecommunications, known as “Skywave propagation”. Most today are probably unaware that long before the “GPS satellites” were conjured, the military, shipping, and airline industry all used a location system known as LORAN (Long Range Navigation), which utilized the principles of Skywave. Even with the yet “primitive” technology in the 1950’s location accuracy virtually anywhere on the habitable earth was possible to within a few tens of feet. This technology has been conveniently “forgotten” as it is now allegedly “obsolete” with the ubiquitous cell phone towers and GPS from “satellites”. Of such obsolescence, a few of us remain skeptical...

Later we’ll examine some juicy tinfoil hattery about said “satellites”, but for now we’ll leave off with the knowledge that long range wide-band radio transmission—totally earth-based—is not only possible, but quite old hat by now.

As an aside to that Sci-News article, those deadly “Van Allen Radiation Belts” are the reason why astronauts are unable to travel into space beyond near earth orbit, or visit any “distant planets”—according to this NASA engineer’s frank admission. In that fantastical depiction by NASA, they plainly tell the rubes that the alleged “moon landings” were, in fact, impossible...

And as early as 1966, actual physical atmospheric testing as well as lab research had proven that the known radiation of the ionosphere (and beyond) was an insurmountable biological and technical obstacle to “vehicles” moving within it. In fact, this notable research paper declared that at that time (well into the supposed “satellite” era), they had not yet developed “transistors capable of radiation exposure”... Instant fried circuitry does not comport with useful “space vehicles”, and the amount of shielding necessary would be an impossibility due to weight. Yet, we are told modern spacecraft need only rely on cello tape and Mylar foil (old tech even in 1966). And the astronauts went to the moon with this construction paper contraption:

It seems I'm more protected during a dental x-ray than NASA bothered to do with their space pioneers. We shall have to wait till later for the wild claims of the Spacemen and a proper perusal of their Disney adventures. We'll learn more of the NASA mysteries, and some of the occult origins of their craft to begin to unravel the deception. With any luck, we can pack in enough information in some cogent way in one or two more articles to get an overall view of what we are truly beholding.

So far we've had a peek behind the curtain of some of the falsehoods perpetrated by the Spacemen (and the complicit churchmen). But let's conclude here with God's OWN account of what He saw. Indeed, what He Himself created...out of nothing. We shall take His testimony to be the truth.

Thus I will retell some of what I've already said elsewhere. This will bring us back around to the beginning and perhaps we can see just how far off the mark the Spacemen really are. Excuse, therefore, the party-foul as I quote myself:

The word for "heaven" in the Bible is H8064, shamayim. There's only one word for heaven/heavens. The KJV translates the word in the singular or the plural depending on the context or perhaps the whim of the translators.

Personally, I wish they'd have left the word untranslated. "In the beginning, God created the shamayim and the earth" (since no one knows what a 'firmament' is anyway). It would have left the mystery and the beauty of it intact, for surely that first passage in the Bible is the most profound and alluring—and succinct of all statements. But in Gen 1:1, something very particular is being described I think, not some nebulous “Heaven”, and is why it’s translated here in the singular. Here’s why—getting down to vs. 8, (and some miss this) we have:

“And God called the firmament Heaven...” Now we already know the firmament (raqiya) is what separates the waters from the waters, and it is a hard or solid thing—above the earth. This is the “vault of heaven”. So replace the word in vs. 1, and I think what is being conveyed is simply this: “In the beginning, God created the Firmament and the Earth.”

He made two things out of a substance (which came from Him obviously as all substance ‘proceedeth out from Him’) where before there was nothing. He made the earth, laying its foundations “on nothing” (Job 26:7) and the waters covered it. And He then made the Firmament (not the “heavens”) over the earth and to separate two bodies of water—one above and one below (the Deep). So, it should be singular here in Gen 1:1, as the KJV has it.

The “heavens” are the space beneath the firmament and above the earth (which we’d call the “sky”), and another space which may include the waters above the firmament -- and also possibly describing a space above that (the “heaven of the heavens” which is the abode of Yahweh and His throne)(Deuteronomy 10:15). I think that is what Ezekiel saw, and also is what Paul describes when he speaks of one “caught up into the third heaven”.

So we have the birds of the air created to “fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.” (v.20) That word “open” actually means “in the face of, or in the presence of”. So the place the birds would fly (and the clouds would be) is 'before the countenance of the Firmament'—or actually under it, not in it.

But before that, we have God creating the great lights in the firmament of the heavens. There’s actually no prepositional words there, the text just reads “let lights firmament heaven”. So where exactly were these placed? Answer: Within the crystalline vault of the firmament—above it, or rather IN it, as we are without it; below it...

In fact, we don’t know whether the luminaries—the moon, the sun, the stars—are even physical objects, or where exactly they are. They may be electrical manifestations on the vault itself, or in waters above it.

There’s another word, H7834, shachaq. Translated “cloud, sky, heaven”. Mostly cloud. It’s from a root meaning ‘dust or fine powder’. Since it basically means clouds or skies, it’s euphemistically or metaphorically used for “heaven” also. And at least once, it’s used to represent the Firmament itself.

Job 37:18 “Hast thou with him spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?”

That word “spread out” is raqa, ‘to beat out, stamp, or stretch, as in a metal plating or overlay’ (as in Exodus 39:3). Here, “sky” is shachaq. And the word “looking glass” is re’iy, ‘a molten cast mirror’. Mirrors were cast from molten brass and then highly polished (Exodus 38:8)

This is the Firmament. What it’s made of, God knows. But I believe it is both transparent AND reflective, as a tinted glass is. It both transmits light above it and it ‘scatters’ light below it.

There ends our discussion for now. It should be evident that what we have been told by NASA is a lie, for it contradicts God’s own testimony. Man has not visited God’s “heavens” above the shamayim, nor can he. We have neither the tools, nor the means of travel, nor the permission of Yahweh to leave our abode. Nor should we wish to—as we shall see next time—outside it is a most uninviting, and inhospitable place to which no creature would desire to “boldly go”... A place, perhaps, for men and angels ultimately consigned there, of “weeping and gnashing of teeth.”
